

– WHERE TIME IS NO MORE –

“now and access to the now is the secret kept from people for so long....DdN”

In the Greek alphabet the first and last letters are alpha and omega, in the scriptures it is written where God says that He is the alpha and the omega, the beginning and the end and today in quantum entanglement, this theory seems to vest itself as a possible new reality.

Yet this is contrary to our linear way of thinking and living, where it is believed and taught that we can only get to the result of grade 12 by starting at grade 1, only get to the top by starting at the bottom, only move through life and gain wisdom by climbing the steps designed and positioned for me. Funny though to note that these theoretical swimming lanes were designed for me, without my consent nor even knowing who I am and what I am about, how I should dream and how I should love and live.

*“From the moment we are born we begin to die”
Zhuangzi*

Following this linear way of thinking and living, always forces upon me a way of living life forward and experiencing life backwards, yet if I could see the future experience in now, I will change the now.

*Why did we accept living life backwards as a way of life?
When did this lie become our only reality and how do we get to a forward living experience?*

Let's for a brief moment, remote as it may be, entertain the thought that maybe just maybe; the alpha is the omega and the beginning is the end and if so then we can start to consider that maybe the problem is the solution; all bound up in oneness. That, there is here, that them is us and that future is now.

Yet how can this even be possible, how can time seem to evaporate and space between places come into one. Yet considering the countless instances of mental telepathy, which is described as a single thought, experienced by two people, in totally different places at the same time.

I have come to the awareness that now is truly a place, yet not found in time, space or matter, and I'm confident that science and quantum entanglement will validate this over time.

This now seems to reveal itself in a non-linear way of being. As in spirit there is too; no time, space or matter. It is, was and always will be. Here and now for all to experience, yet being is the way into such awareness, which is defined as now. A place where grace is not considered a miracle and abundance is not referred to as luck, birthed in self-promotion and control.

If we could describe quantum entanglement using a spiritual frame; then we will understand that:

*“the stars and the universe as far away as it may seem is part of you.
Your understanding of oneness and US in One has made that, not you.
Now oneness; include this in your understanding and splendour is the result of the light that comes from you, now US. How else can splendour come about on earth if this not our reality. Even when you were not;
you created all and out of nothing all was created...”
Once we understand this power we will be able to live this now”.*

If the solution is in the problem and time, space and matter is removed, then the problem requires a new set of lenses that realises that there is no solution needed in the first place, as in now nothing can be broken or have a need for fixing, as the solution is found in the problem and not outside somewhere in time, space and matter.

This new way of thinking we have never been taught, as it is thought that solutions lie somewhere away from the problem and within someone else and a linear way of cause and effect may too be found limiting.

Yet now and oneness, as described above by quantum entanglement is discovering that this seems to be true and that the ego's lustful desire of controlling the outcome; through applied well strategized networking effects, pattern recognition, prediction, data analysis and actually just trying to be clever; in the end only leaves us with nothing more than mere hoping that the results fit my desires and expectations.

That using the past to predict the future, applying momentum and the power law to construct solutions and me controlling the outcome is the driving force for living each day, only delivers a bloated sense of false and very brief satisfaction. Resulting in a next day found to be more empty than the day before and this driving force of linear thinking and living and me falsely being convicted that life and its circumstances I have under control, is merely filled with perceived solutions and assumptions, and becomes nothing more than our coping mechanism and survival at best.

*What is needed for us to adopt a new way of life and not merely adapt over time?
Why do we battle with adoption, has our habits become so engrained in us and what do we look like when there are no habits?
Are we so scared of a new us that living with the familiar old self,
the unsatisfied me is considered better!*

When we come to realise the difference between what is our reality vs what is real to us, we open a window into now where reality is found outside of time, space and matter, as it is purely an awareness inside of me and nothing more. Yet when something is perceived to be real, we come to acknowledge that the definition of real is a delusional view, nothing more than made up perceptions and assumptions at best. However clever we feel when we positioned it.

This transitioning from real into reality requires of us to first enter oneness with our reality (the problem), where the problem is the solution and from within this new understanding I rather chose to find the purpose of me within the problem, that by default becomes the solution and my new being. And avoids and tiresome directionless journey of trying to dissolve the problem and thus in fact avoid accessing the solution via a key called the problem.

The place where time, space and matter and solutions from outside become irrelevant and out of nothing all is created. A place where the ego dies and the spiritual me, is by default set free to guide and lead my daily life.

The challenge with adopting this thinking as a way of life, requires of me to settle and enter oneness with my reality; aware that the problem is the solution and that it merely requires this becoming one with my reality as the first step, before I can take action and proceed on my journey.

Yet, my obsession and desperation with time and controlling the results make adaption rather a way of life and my choice, as adaption is more convenient, as I can choose when to learn and when to stop. This journey of slowly waking up was never meant to be, yet this journey of living by discovery is also good for us. Noting that this journey of living by discovery eventually always delivers an event if not at the end, age, that forces me into a new way of viewing life. And from that day onwards my reality and experience of oneness in now, is my new way of life and splendour becomes a new dimension.

A Oneness dimension where all life is found inside this new reality of I AM. Where space, time and matter do not exist and the reality that the alpha is the omega, the beginning is the end , them is us, and that the problem is the solution, becomes my new self-healing way of life.

For centuries, glimpses people have seen and over time many books they have written, yet only those that migrate from adaption to adoption into I AM as a new way of life, are the ones that start encountering a forward living experiencing where ALL is found in NOW.

With all the love
